'George, my grandfather, died of Alzheimer's disease. He was a man with a great sense of humour, many friends and lots of memories, including having bravely fought in World War II.

'Alzheimer's is a cruel disease which stripped him of who he was, to the point where he could not even recognise his family. As a young man I found it harrowing to watch a role model seemingly disappear before my eyes. As an adult I'm committed to making a change.'

This week Richard Boyle, swam the English Channel, one of the toughest open water swims around. He completed his gruelling challenge in 13 hours and three minutes, and has raised an astounding £18,185.68 for both Alzheimer's Society & Parkinson's UK!

Well Done Richard, We just know George would be so proud of what you've achieved!
